

Go to the website <https://pro.magnumphotos.com/>

Explore different photographers by clicking on the "shop" link in the menu then the "photographers" link.

Be warned that, because this is photojournalism you may come across some disturbing images. Please use your own discretion when exploring certain photographer's work and skip any that you feel uncomfortable viewing.

Copy each photo you choose into a word document (If you are not able to click and drag the image straight into a word document then take a screenshot > Command/shift/4) Label the photo with the title of the work (if possible), date, photographers name and the capitalized subject of your photohunt. Hint - if you are smart with your screenshot you won't have to retype the name or dates. Examples are provided for each topic.

DO NOT use the search engine. Use this opportunity to explore the work of master photographers at your leisure.

1. Find an example of the use of Shallow depth of field.

Elliott Erwitt | Personal Best New York City, USA. 1974

2. Find an example of the use of Great depth of field

Larry Towell, the Menonites, 1994

3. Find an example of the use of shallow DOF in which the subject is in the background subverting our natural ideas of subject/ground relationship.
